"Get the 411 (information) on Today's Youth" conference is intended to provide information about behaviors that put youth at-risk, factors that can prevent youth from engaging in these behaviors, and national and local programs that work to address attitudinal changes and behaviors.

The conference will address:

Internet predators (adults and juveniles), cyberbullying, online grooming, online enticement in Hawaii, sex assault, underage drinking, new drugs entering the youth culture, child prostitution, fetal alcohol syndrome disabilities, teen suicide, mixed martial arts and teen violence, LGBTY and violence, social norms marketing (national and local programs), and curriculum/programming for Millennials (now generation).

Who should attend?

Anyone who works with or is concerned about youth and their families. For example, service providing agencies; schools; federal, state, and city government agencies; health professionals; clergy; businesses; and others in the community.

For More 411 on the Conference:
